A longtime admirer of Iowa State University’s Campanile and its beloved bells, Rebekah Veldboom has been a carillon student for eight semesters. She was introduced to the carillon by a friend and former carillon student, who suggested that she might enjoy taking lessons. After meeting with University Carillonneur Tin-Shi Tam a few days before freshman year began in 2020, she signed up for a semester of carillon lessons and never looked back.

As an Environmental Science Major with a certificate in Soil Science and a minor in Sustainability, Rebekah has found carillon to be an excellent outlet for her creative side. In addition to learning and refining musical skills through lessons and concerts, she has filled and helped develop the roles of both Vice President and President of the Student Carillonneur Leadership Council on campus. She is beyond grateful for the support she has received from her family, friends, and carillon family, and especially for the invaluable instruction, opportunities, and support she has received from Dr. Tam.
